Pinehurst Mannor House

The Pinehurst Manor House, with its rich history and transformation into a contemporary hotel, stands as a testament to the evolution of architectural and cultural landscapes. Originally built in 1923, the Manor House was a product of the Tufts organization, designed to be an elegant yet informal English country manor. Over the years, it has seen various changes, including a year-long renovation completed in 2019 that modernized the facilities while preserving its classic charm. The Manor House is not just a building; it's a canvas that reflects the artistic and personal expression of those who have resided within its walls. One notable resident, Mallory Hickey, referred to her abode as "my happy house," infusing it with vibrant colors and eclectic decor that transformed it into "Mallory's Gallery." This residence, once named Blackjack Cottage due to the abundance of blackjack oak trees on the property, has been a witness to the lives and stories of its inhabitants, including Mrs. Butterfield and Richard Tufts, each leaving their unique imprint on the place. The discovery of a tombstone dating back to 1889 during construction adds a layer of mystery and deepens the lore surrounding the Manor House. Today, the Manor serves as a bridge between the past and present, offering guests a chance to experience the legacy of Pinehurst in a setting that balances historical significance with modern luxury.
